Reflection: The Science of Character – Morris Chang and Oscar Peterson as Role Models

Strengths I Perceive in Others

In others, I deeply admire qualities such as:

- Resilience: The ability to face challenges with determination and emerge stronger.
- Opportunism: Seeing possibilities where others might not and turning them into success.
- Curiosity: A drive to learn and evolve, regardless of age or circumstance.
- Creativity: The ability to think differently, innovate, and express oneself uniquely.

These qualities are embodied by two remarkable individuals: Morris Chang and Oscar Peterson.

Morris Chang: Resilience and Opportunism

Morris Chang, founder of TSMC, exemplifies resilience, curiosity, and opportunism. Starting a new company at 57, he demonstrated that age and setbacks are no barriers to innovation. His story inspires me to:

- Embrace Setbacks: Viewing challenges as stepping stones to future opportunities.
 - Seize Opportunities: His creation of the pure-play foundry model revolutionized the semiconductor industry, empowering global tech innovation.
 - Lead with Vision and Experience: Chang's blend of experience and foresight showcases the power of lifelong learning and bold leadership.

Oscar Peterson: Creativity and Cool

Oscar Peterson, one of the greatest jazz pianists, represents creativity, coolness under pressure, and unmatched artistry. Watching him perform is a masterclass in:

- Effortless Mastery: His technical precision is complemented by an innate ability to weave emotion into his music.
- Coolness and Confidence: Peterson's calm demeanor on stage, even during complex improvisations, reflects his deep connection to his craft and audience.
- Unbounded Creativity: His improvisations push the boundaries of jazz, blending innovation with respect for tradition.

Peterson's artistry inspires me to:

- Pursue Mastery: Dedicate myself to honing my craft with the same passion and commitment.
 - Stay Calm Under Pressure: Approach challenges with composure and confidence.
 - Innovate Boldly: Think outside the box and express my unique perspective in my work.

How These Role Models Shape My Aspirations

- Morris Chang inspires me to focus on resilience, curiosity, and visionary leadership. His journey proves that it's never too late to start anew or make a significant impact.
- Oscar Peterson motivates me to embrace creativity, coolness, and confidence in expressing my individuality and mastering my craft.

Conclusion

The stories of Morris Chang and Oscar Peterson remind me that character strengths like resilience, curiosity, opportunism, creativity, and calm confidence are timeless and transformative. Whether starting a company or performing on stage, these qualities enable us to face challenges, seize opportunities, and leave a lasting legacy. By emulating these role models, I aspire to integrate their strengths into my life and create meaningful, impactful work.
